

I just learned of a great chemistry exhibit at Skidmore College called "Molecules That Matter" that uses large ball and stick models and other types of media to explain how history has been affected by the ten selected molecules. It will be at Skidmore until April, and it might make a good field trip. I have attached the newspaper article and a link to the Tang Museum at Skidmore's website with more information about the exhibit